Letter To The Editor

The Editor
Times-Virginian
Appomattox, Va.

We are truly amazed after reading an article in an area newspaper concerning a push by local officials for a by-pass around the town of Appomattox. Those representing our town were the mayor and town manager, other county officials and the head of our Chamber of Commerce.

It puzzles us - if these people are interested in the welfare of the business people how can they push the tourists and other out-of-towners away from town?

Those businesses directly benefiting from the out-of-towners are: 9 gas stations, 2 dairy bars, 6 restaurants, 1 factory dress outlet, 1 craft center, 2 laundromats, 2 antique shops, 2 souvenier shops and 3 motels (26 establishments). Not to mention that one can see many campers and out-of-state cars shopping in our super markets and drug stores.

Those of us on Route 460 may survive on a smaller income. (Others of us may have to relocate, tearing up happy roots.

Knowing in past history how towns have fought to keep their roads and tourist business in town, it's a mystery why our town leaders are pushing to have them by-pass us.

The only ones that could benefit are large investors who could put up new facilities adjacent to the by-pass but certainly not us little people.

As far as our "so-called" traffic problem, this only happens on Friday afternoons and is caused by our own local citizens. This problem will not be alleviated by a by-pass.

Who, locally, can possibly benefit from this if every business in Appomattox is by-passed?

Sincerely,
Ray and Janet Noble

The Pastor Speaks

Many clergypeople will tell you that right after Easter comes a feeling of "letdown", a natural reaction to the high emotions of the season of Lent and Easter. Ministers and laity alike have perhaps been heavily involved and committed in programs and preparations which demanded more time than usually devoted to formal church activities.

Such feelings must have dominated the early church, also. Depression and despair must have controlled the hearts of the earliest Christians, even after experiencing the physical presence of the risen Christ. Only thus can we explain the events of the first couple of chapters of Acts. Then the company asked Christ when he would restore the kingdom of Israel. He responded by calling upon them to be "witnesses" in mission to all the earth.

Maybe it is precisely at the times when our faith has been challenged that we are expected to be witnesses. The "main-line" churches have almost forgotten the meaning of the word "mission" these days. We think it means sending a few dollars to a man or lady slaving away in Africa or Latin America. The best opportunity for witness, however, comes in the opportunity to show the meaning of Christ in your life to the people who know you best, the people who see you every day. Our young people are the best witnesses of our own faith and commitment.

Lent and Easter are times when we reconsider the meaning of the Cross and the meaning of the Resurrection. Now that Easter is past, it is time to get about the basic work of the church, the proclaiming of that gospel. For a couple of months, we have looked inward., remembering the lessons of faith. Now it is our task to look outward, passing those lessons on to the rest of the world.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE SERENDIPITY ROAD

Lesson for April 17, 1977

Background Scripture: Luke 24:13-35
Devotional Reading: 1 Corinthians 15:1-11

Serendipity, in case you've forgotten, is that happy faculty of discovering something of value while in the act of searching for something else. (It comes from the ancient Arab name for Sri Lanka or Ceylon.) All of us have serendipity experiences, although often we fail to recognize them as such.

A little over four years ago I had a serendipity experience on the road to Emmaus. It was my first tour to the Holy Land and we were preparing to tour Jerusalem for Athens. One day before our scheduled departure from Jerusalem we received word that Air France has suddenly and inexplicably cancelled our flight. We could not change to an alternate flight until the following day and our stay in Greece would thus be cut short by a day — a very valuable day in light of our brief itinerary there.

Kept from recognizing him

What would we do with our extra day in Jerusalem, I asked our Arab guide? It was hard for me to suppress my keen disappointment which was shared by the members of the tour. Elias, our guide, however, was happy for the opportunity to have one more day to show us the Holy Land. "I have just the thing," he assured me, "we'll take them on an excursion to Emmaus." Hardly encouraged, but having no alternative, I agreed.

As we motored over the narrow road we came to Gibeon, the ancient city whose inhabitants tricked Joshua. Here, disembarking from our bus, we walked for half a mile over what had been the Emmaus road in Jesus' time. "Here," said Elias, his eyes glistening and moist, "is one place where I believe I can say in all certainty that we are 'walking where Jesus walked!'" None of us said anything and the silence continued until, to make certain we all quite understood, Elias said, "This is the very road to Emmaus upon which Jesus and his two disciples walked on Easter Sunday evening!"

Immediately I thought of how the two disciples had walked this road with Jesus, yet not recognizing him. It occurred to me that that same thing could have happened to us that afternoon.

Their eyes were opened

Suddenly, I realized just how serendipitous was the cancellation of our flight and the additional day in Israel. We were not missing something; in fact, we had gained something. We had taken this road to see a shrine and along the way our eyes were opened and we experienced the Christ!

Is that not a common experience? There are many times during life's journey when we seem to be on a secondary or country road, perhaps even a detour, and are quite oblivious to the presence of our Lord with us. Like those two disciples, our eyes are "kept from recognizing him." Just because we expect Jesus to be limited to the temples, the courts, and main highways of life, does not mean that he is thus limited. If we look for him along the way, if our hearts are open to him, if we will expect him as our companion, he is just as likely to appear on our Emmaus roads, talking with us and breaking bread with us, as anywhere else along life's way.

Takes Time Out for Baby

Still Loses 75 Pounds
Credits Conway Diet Institute

Mrs. Kathy Zimmerman has lost 75 pounds and reached her goal weight while following the Conway 1000 Calorie Diet and attending the weekly Insight Seminars.

The interesting part of Kathy's story is that mid way through her weight loss she took time out to have a baby daughter. Six weeks after delivery, Kathy went back to the Conway program and lost the last 33 pounds. She's now at goal weight and 75 pounds lighter. Kathy, a registered nurse, says "I felt miserable when I was overweight. I knew the harm obesity was doing to my health. I had never been able to diet successfully before. I found the Conway Diet easy to follow and satisfying. The Insight seminars were stimulating and informative. The interaction with other members was a real support."

THE BASIC THREE

Are you confused with the multiplicity of life insurance policy combinations and packages? Well, don't be. Basically, there are only three basic kinds of policies - term, whole life and endowment.

Policies with such names as "Family income", "Family plan", "retirement income" are variations of the basic policies that have been developed to fit special family needs.

Term insurance protects for a limited number of years or until age 65.

Whole life insurance, as the name suggests, protects for as long as you live and pay the premiums. (Limit payment insurance also protects for the whole of life, but premiums are completely paid up by a certain age or number of years.)

Endowment insurance, the last of the big three, pays you a specified amount after certain number of years, and then the insurance ends, but if you were to die before the policy matures, the sum would immediately go to your beneficiary.

SPRING SPRUCE-UP TIME

This year's erratic weather conditions have probably wrecked havoc with many a home's exterior. It will be the season to spruce up by scrubbing and painting the house!

No paint, not even the highest quality, will stick if applied over dirt or grease. Check areas most likely to need washing, including overhangs, eaves, porches, gutters, window frames. Sweep away dust. Then apply detergent or soap suds with a scrub brush. Rinse with a hose. Allow to dry, before painting.

Peeling, flaking, alligatoring (thick paint coat cracked from expansion and contraction), chalking (caused by weathering of paint and the sun's rays) or the presence of mildew can be corrected. To do this, scrape loose paint with a broad blade knife or scraper; then with a wire brush. Sand and wipe off sanding dust with a clean, dry cloth. Wash and hose down the surface.

Efflorescence, caused by dampness in masonry, is a white or yellowish crystalline deposit which may peel or flake. If this condition exists, masonry should be brushed with a wire brush before washing. Allow the surface to dry completely, if repainting. It is suggested that masonry also be sandblasted prior to refinishing with a non-chalking paint.

Moisture is the biggest single cause of paint problems. Loosened chimney flashing, siding cracks, open joints between concrete and wood surfaces and gutters that are rusted or clogged all allow moisture to seep into the siding. Repair these areas. Hammer any protruding nails below the surface, putty the nailhead and sand smooth. Then spot prime. Remove rust spots with steel wool to prevent bleed through. Use putty or glazing compound for patching cracks in siding and holes such as those around wiring leading into the house.

Moisture from indoors also creates problems. prevent future damage: Have exhaust fans in bathroom and kitchen, ventilate attic, provide enough vents in siding. Caulk cracks and repair leaks.

Select the right product for the surface to be painted and read directions on the container. Primer, a base for bare wood, should be compatible with the finish-coat paint being used. Latex paints are popular. They are easy to apply, have good color retention, are durable and can be applied to slightly damp surfaces. Best of all, cleanup is simple. Oil base paints have excellent penetrating and durability qualities. There are also special paints for concrete, masonry and metal surfaces. Check with the retailer for a variety of products to do your specific "spruce-up" job.
